Understanding Cooperatives: How to Start a Cooperative

Cooperative Information Report 45, Section 14

When Should a Cooperative be Organized? Cooperatives are formed in response to an economic need such as providing marketing, processing, bargaining, manufacturing, and purchasing services not currently available, or available only at excessive cost.

If interested in forming a cooperative, learn all you can about the legal, economic, and financial aspects of a cooperative business. Careful planning increases the chances of success.

Why Groups Organize Cooperatives:
- To improve bargaining power.
- To reduce costs.
- To obtain products or services.
- To create new and expand existing market opportunities.
- To improve the qualities of the products or services.
- To increase income.

Steps in Organizing

Determine the Economic Need
A cooperative is organized in response to a specific problem or opportunity. The idea is often initiated by a small group that meets to discuss the need. The meeting should focus on the economic need and the potential use of a cooperative as a solution. Discussion topics should include:
- What information about the perceived need is readily available?
- Could a cooperative effort address this need?
- What information about cooperatives is available?
- Who can serve as an adviser to the group?
- Who should be invited to a meeting of potential users?
- How should potential users be contacted?

If a cooperative seems to offer a solution, a larger meeting of interested potential users may be planned.

Hold Initial Exploratory Meeting
A meeting of potential member-users should be called to decide if interest is
Member participation in decisionmaking activities and sense of cooperative spirit are important for success.

CONDUCT A MEMBER SURVEY AND MARKET OR SUPPLY ANALYSIS.
The steering committee must take steps to learn all it can about the cooperative's potential members and what the cooperative can do for them. The survey should explore four areas:

- Members' needs—The cooperative is formed and operated for the sole purpose of meeting members' needs.
- Anticipated business volume—The cooperative must have some assurance of sufficient volume to operate as a business and to plan for facilities and needed equipment.
- Location and business or service characteristics of prospective members—Where, how, and when the cooperative delivers its services is a prime consideration.
- Opinions of members—How do potential members feel about cooperatives and participation in one? Member participation in decisionmaking activities and sense of cooperative spirit are important for success.

The market or supply analysis will determine if the proposed cooperative has an economic role in the marketplace. The analysis will identify which activities are appropriate, business volume, and financial capabilities of the potential cooperative members.

Select a Steering Committee
Steering committee members should have an interest in the cooperative and sound business judgment. They often become the cooperative's incorporators and may serve as its first board of directors. The committee has a two-part job:

- Deciding the feasibility of the cooperative: Will the proposed cooperative succeed? Will it be valuable to members?
- Preparing a specific, detailed business plan for the proposed cooperative.

The committee should consult specialists in the areas of law, finance, and cooperative business operations. Two essential studies must be initiated: a member survey and a market analysis or supply analysis.
Potential members may be asked to invest earnest money at this point to demonstrate their commitment to the cooperative and to cover some of the organizational costs.

Prepare a Business Plan
Every business should have a business plan. The steering committee should arrange for completion of an in-depth business plan prepared by a professional familiar with cooperative organization. The plan defines the cooperative's operations and other structural issues before the cooperative organization is finalized.

Draft Legal Papers and Incorporate;
The articles of incorporation state the purpose and scope of the cooperative business and give the cooperative a distinct legal standing.

The bylaws state how the cooperative will conduct business and must be consistent with both State statutes and the articles of incorporation. Legal counsel should be consulted on these and other legal documents, such as membership or marketing agreements.

Third Exploratory Member Meeting
At the third exploratory meeting, potential members review the work and recommendations of the steering committee, including the articles of incorporation, bylaws, and any adjustments made to the business plan. Support for the cooperative should again be evaluated by a vote on whether or not to form the cooperative. If affirmative, the incorporators file the articles of incorporation.

First Annual Meeting of Cooperative
At the first meeting of the cooperative, members carry out two very important member responsibilities:
- Approve the bylaws.
- Elect the board of directors.

Steering committee members are often board candidates, but other members may also be elected to these leadership positions.

First Board of Directors Meeting
The first meeting of the board of directors should focus on selection of the board officers, committee appointments, and carrying out the business plan. Additional agenda items include arranging debt capital, conducting a membership drive, establishing manager qualifications, and conducting a manager search.

Acquire Capital
The board of directors is responsible for arranging adequate capital. Capital may be raised by members purchasing stock (equity) and borrowing funds (debt) from a lending institution. Members must invest or pledge sufficient capital in the business to demonstrate commitment to the cooperative's success. Exact amounts will depend on activity and lender requirements. Projected cash-flow schedules and financial statements from the business plan are important in determining capital needs and arranging for debt capital.

Hire a Manager
One of the most important duties of the board of directors is to hire a qualified manager who is responsible for day-to-day operations.
Hire Employees, Acquire Facilities, Begin Operations

The manager hires capable employees and advises the board on what facilities and equipment to acquire, within the budget and operation guidelines established by the board.

Important Factors for Cooperative Success

Experience shows that a newly organized cooperative’s chances for success can be improved by doing the following:

- Clearly identifying the economic need.
- Reaching agreement on the cooperative’s mission.
- Developing good leadership.
- Gaining the commitment of members to do business with the cooperative.
- Following sound business practices.

Summary

A cooperative is a unique form of business used by people and businesses for their mutual benefit. Whatever its purpose, starting a cooperative requires considerable time, energy, and commitment by potential members to finance and use the business and select knowledgeable directors who will hire a competent manager.

Where to Get Help

The U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Rural Economic and Community Development (RECD) offices in some States have cooperative development specialists on staff who can help you. For additional information, contact USDA’s Rural Business and Cooperative Development Service/Cooperative Services, in Washington, D.C. Cooperative Services has a staff of professionals who can help organize a new cooperative and provide technical assistance to existing cooperatives. Write to:

Rural Business and Cooperative Development Service
Cooperative Services
Box 3250
Washington, DC 20250-3250
Phone (202) 720-3350
FAX (202) 690-2750,
Attention: CDD